

Submitter: Kevin Schumacher
On Behalf Of:
Committee: Senate Committee On Education
Measure: SB767

It is important for kids and parents to have the freedom of where they receive their education. Education is a very personal thing, everyone learns differently and has preference to what is focused on in their education.

Being able to learn in a way that is most coherent for the child, and topics that are most relevant or of interest to them will increase their interest and ability to continue learning outside of school. Forcing any particular type of schooling on a child can certainly turn them off altogether and then we have lost a brilliant mind.