Measure: HJR20

I have always believed that young people have a vital role to play in shaping the future of our world. I have seen firsthand the creativity, passion, and energy that young people bring to the table, and I am constantly inspired by their ideas and vision for the future.

Lowering the voting age to 16 would be a powerful step in recognizing the important role that young people play in our democracy. It would give them a voice and a stake in the decisions that affect their lives and communities, and it would empower them to hold elected officials accountable for their actions and decisions.

It has been proven time and time again that when young people are engaged in politics and have the opportunity to vote, they are more likely to stay engaged throughout their lives. By lowering the voting age, we can help create a culture of civic engagement and democratic participation that will last for generations to come.

So let us work together to support HJR 20 and empower our young people to be active and engaged citizens. Together, we can build a brighter and more inclusive future for all of us.
