I moved here from Maine where they use rank order voting. In many elections, especially primary elections, with more than two people running, rank order voting ensures that people vote for the people they want. Otherwise one can be faced with needing to "vote strategically" based on guesses about how other people will vote. I believe it is the only thing that might help politicians learn to work together and ultimately save our democratic system. For these and several other reasons you have heard from others, I strongly support rank order voting.
