

Submitter: Dimitri Stephanopoulos

On Behalf Of:

Committee: Senate Committee On Energy and Environment

Measure: SB871

It would seem advantageous for the developers if the codes were easy to comply with and less expensive so that any changes to the codes don't impact the developers...maybe the state, county or city would subsidize any permits costs to new codes to make resiliency codes easier to comply with. A win for the climate and the developers.