

Submitter: Shauna McKain-Storey

On Behalf Of:

Committee: Senate Committee On Energy and Environment

Measure: SB870

I support this bill because I believe that it is necessary to adapt the construction of new buildings, especially housing, to be more resilient to climate change. People need housing that can be heated and cooled more efficiently, both to save money and to be protected from extreme weather. And since construction and housing is a significant source of green house gas emissions, reducing these emissions is an important element in fighting climate change.