

I am straightforward and believe that consequences for a person's decisions and subsequent actions are a compelling teacher!

The more powerful or painful the consequences of any given decision or action, the less inclined the average person will be to repeat it.

Short-circuiting that age-old mechanism of cause and effect provides a disincentive to benefit from its often "harsh" tendrils; it costs the taxpayers nothing yet benefits those willing to submit to its simple lessons.

I do not believe that we, the taxpayers, should have to pay for those unwilling to do so!

HB 2002, Reproductive Health Rights, is not just such a disincentive; its title is a euphemism!
