

Submitter: Rebecca Roth

On Behalf Of:

Committee: House Committee On Behavioral Health and Health Care

Measure: HB2002

The website sexchangeregret.com gives a platform for people who have intense regret about surgeries they have undergone in the hope of "transitioning" to a new life. Surgeries and drugs promoted for people with the promise of happiness, are usually not explained well, and sometimes not at all. Pushing surgery and drugs, two life-altering, irreversible and dangerous options, without considering other mental health treatments is not good medical care.

There are many children who regret irreversible mutilation, and 9 from Oregon, per article published in Forbes, and posted to sexchangeregret.com, and say their schools pushed them into it.

The person whose website this is, had surgery years ago, with the promise that it would make him happy. He lived 8 years as a woman, before he suddenly knew he was not a woman, would never be one, and now was not a man either. At that point he tried to commit suicide, but someone rescued him and since then has lived as a man, full of regret for all that he lost.

He has written numerous books on his experience, some of which are: Gender, Lies, and Suicide...
Paper Genders.

Blaire White has posted many Youtube videos interviewing various people who have had what are called, "top surgery" and "bottom surgery." The many guests regret their own surgeries, say they are constantly dealing with necrotic tissue, and are thoroughly against child mutilation. All say they were shuttled to surgery without having any other treatments or diagnoses considered.

What is also happening already, is that parents are being left out of the knowledge of the manipulation of their child's perception of self as strangers basically kidnap the children and expose them to various pornographic curricula to get them to question their identity. The state then profits from money from the federal government that Obamacare provides, and the child's future is ransacked for profit. Many who are led in this direction commit suicide due to their distress.

Concerned Women for America has information on their website about this, and also Parents' Rights in Education.