Measure: HB3390

It's no longer popular or socially acceptable to wear fur because of the immense animal cruelty required to create a completely unnecessary luxury item. The only notable exceptions, like fishing lures, used fur, taxidermy, and cultural/spiritual use by Native Americans are exempted in this bill and not affected. Fur is a dying trade, built upon death and suffering. Officially banning the sale of fur will not kill a thriving industry but will make it clear that Oregonians do not stand for unnecessary animal cruelty.
