Ah yes, jailing and fining adults for owning property that has always been legal for all of American history, AND is a constitutionally protected right for all Americans adults! That is an absolutely fantastic idea, and bravo to those submitting this idea.

Surely it isn't weird in the slightest that we allow 20 year olds to do anything they could ever want like the rest of us: gamble, sign contracts, fight and die in our military, marry, etc, but owning a tool to defend themselves? Slow down buckaroo! You'll shoot your eye out!

Unless you're shooting the eye out of someone overseas the U.S. government wants you to shoot. That's A-okay, and is absolutely well within your cognitive and physical capabilities!

It's time for the U.S. as a whole to answer the question: what is an adult? 18, or 21? Enough of this "welllllll, you're kind of an adult for these things, but not reealllyyyy for these things" nonsense.

May I also repeat for the infinite-th time, this has never been an issue ever. Until just now, apparently. What changed in our society to make this an issue? It isn't the guns. The guns have always been here, and they've always been accessible. More accessible than they are now. Shame on any politician entertaining this bill. Adult men and women have the right to own tools to protect themselves and their families.
