Measure: HB2005

Hello I am a veteran of the United States Army I served overseas and I believe in the Constitution and what it stands for. Again we are attacking an inanimate object produced by a man or a woman using their skills for the purpose of hobby or competition. This proposal has the best interests of all of us in mind especially when it comes to saving lives, that I understand. However, we are getting further and further away from the root cause of the heinous crimes that we see more and more often and that is the ill will of bad people. A simple question is.... why do we not hold accountable those people who have ill will towards others or have a emotional mental or physical condition that needs to be addressed, before we go after objects that cannot in and of themselves jump up and kill people on their own accord? I opposed this measure because it does not go after the root cause of the problem.
