Measure: HB3390

In the 21st century there is no reason for any animal to be raised and slaughtered simply so that a human can wear the skin of that animal. In earlier centuries, there may have been a necessity for humans to use animal skins for warmth and safety but those are not satisfactory reasons today. Vanity does not count. And there are other means of making a living that don't involve the cruelty that humans do to other living beings simply to provide an ego sign for someone to parade around in and supposedly show off their superiority.
