Measure: HB2005

Every year laws are passed related to guns. Not a single law attempted or passed does a single thing to change outcomes. Why? Because criminals don't follow laws.

A gun, an inanimate object can't do a darn thing by itself. It takes another object, a bullet which someone has to put in the gun. Then it takes pulling the trigger. When you go through all this process, that's a morality issue and not a single law will stop that.

Quit punishing law abiding citizens because you won't punish the violators.

The states drug laws don't work and have created more issues. The state fails at most of what it inacts.

I strongly oppose this because it will have ZERO impact that you state it will.
