There was a time in human history when we needed the skin of other living creatures to ensure our own survival. That was then, this is now.

Today we take use fur from-other living creatures purely for the sake of fashion and vanity. I cannot speak for all of humanity but personally, those are not good enough reasons to continue the miserable fur trade in todays society. Today we humans have more than enough alternatives for keeping warm or for looking pretty. Many wonderful synthetics, waterproof , ripproof and super warm textiles are available for far less cost and far less care than the furs that once upon a time might have been the difference between life and death... Or the furs that were seen as status symbols when draped around the shoulders of wealthy society matrons.

It is time we put this heinous practice to an end.
