Measure: HB3390

This bill has unintended negative consequences for recreational fly fishers, fly fishing businesses, river guides, and tourism businesses that serve anglers all across Oregon. The bill is poorly written and would have serious economic impact on small business in our state, driving that business to surrounding states that take a more conservative approach to this issue.

Most materials used by fly tiers are byproducts of the food industry or population controls and as such should not be included in this bill. Banning the sale of these products in Oregon does nothing to provide the intended protections for fur bearing animals.
