Despite the high median income, the majority of Oregonians are working people who cannot afford a 14% rent cap. All these policies do is exacerbate the housing crisis, increasing the number of unhoused people and making it easier for predatory renters to exploit people. It's in the best interest of Oregonians and the state of Oregon that its people can afford to live within its borders. Rent hikes hurt working people, and working people are what makes the state run.
