Measure: HB3390

This bill has unintended consequences on the huge fly fishing industry based in Oregon. In the bills current form, fly tying materials would fall under restricted items and would not gain exemptions like taxidermy or leather. Fly anglers are some of the most outspoken conservationists and while we all want what is best for the animals and the environment, this bill, in its current form, would only hurt the outdoors industry and the members of the public that support it.

I oppose this bill in its current form.
