The OHA sounds like the name of an organization that knows what it's doing. Nothing can be further from the truth. This is a committee of bureaucrats that have no idea about science, health nor any authority over medical boards. The OHA still mandates masking in clinical settings, citing math as their evidence. They have mistakenly called it science when it's just estimates, statistics and pure speculation. No science whatsoever is listed in their justification for calling on the masking of people and clinical offices meant to help people. An organization like that cannot be in charge of established medical boards. They have no medical doctors on their board.

The website lists their reason for existence as guaranteeing the best insurance prices for Oregonians. All I have listed above has nothing to do with bargaining and all to do with power grabs. They can't differentiate math from science, there is no reason to give them any more power especially after overstepping their promised duties to the people.
