Currently, I neither trap nor hunt furbearers, but I strongly support the right of those who wish to carry on this tradition. It is a tradition held by Native Americans and practiced by the earliest European settlers and has been done until today. Who knows, I might wish to have the option of engaging in this ancient practice myself someday. Even if I do not, I would want the option for my grandchildren. There would be no point in trapping if the pelts could not be sold.
