

Submitter: Shane Rogers

On Behalf Of:

Committee: Senate Committee On Judiciary

Measure: SB348

The second amendment is clear "shall not be infringed". Any ordinance or law that is passed by an individual State or the Congress of the United States Government that prohibits it has no binding power over any of the residents of the United States of America because of the second amendment binds the Congress, State legislatures, and Judiciary to this amendment. Thus nullifying any such law or ordinance even if passed by the members of these current government bodies. Which, again, will have no legal binding power over the citizens of the United States of America.
