Dear Representative Bobby Levy,

Oregon's growing population highlights the need for a more comprehensive approach to wildlife management. The eastern side of the state, populated with Hispanic communities and Tribal entities, warrants better representation on the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission. The current arrangement favors urban areas, sidelining the vast diversity across Oregon. As the Commission undergoes reformation, let's support HB3086 and seek a new paradigm that values representation from all corners of the state.

Sincerely,
Gary C alhoun

Dear Representative Bobby Levy,

The new Congressional seat presents a chance to reevaluate the OFW Commission's structure. By incorporating the five river basins, we can ensure that Oregon's diverse regions are better represented. Furthermore, the inclusion of two at-large commissioners from different sides of the Cascades will create a more balanced representation. I urge you to thoughtfully consider this amendment as we aim to reform the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission.

Dear Representative Bobby Levy,

The current representation of Oregon's Fish and Wildlife Commission, based on political boundaries, inadequately represents the state's diverse ecological regions. A better approach would be to use natural river basin boundaries and have commissioners who are knowledgeable and experienced in their areas. Supporting HB3086 is necessary, as it aims to revise the current statute to accommodate this change. By including two members from either side of the Cascade range, the OFW Commission will be able to prioritize wildlife and natural resources.

Dear Representative Bobby Levy,

I implore you to examine the possibility of revising the Fish and Wildlife Commission. Ensuring fair representation based on geography can significantly improve wildlife management. The Oregon Water Resources Commission has already set an example for us to follow. If we don't make changes, we may inadvertently politicize wildlife management in Oregon. A broader diversity of commissioners will result in better management for all of Oregon.

Dear Representative Bobby Levy,

Oregon's growing population highlights the need for a more comprehensive approach to wildlife management. The eastern side of the state, populated with Hispanic communities and Tribal entities, warrants better representation on the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission. The current arrangement favors urban areas, sidelining the vast diversity across Oregon. As the Commission undergoes reformation, let's support HB3086 and seek a new paradigm that values representation from all corners of the state.

Sincerely,
Riley Stephenson

Dear Representative Bobby Levy,

Oregon's expanding population calls for an inclusive approach to wildlife management that addresses the interests of various stakeholders. The eastern regions of the state, which are home to Hispanic communities and Tribal entities, deserve better representation on the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission. The current setup mainly favors urban populations, disregarding the state's considerable diversity. As the Commission is being revamped, let's support HB3086 and work towards a new paradigm that values representation from all regions.

Sincerely,
AUNDREA MAJEWSKI

Dear Representative Bobby Levy,

A regional representation model, as proposed in HB3086, guarantees that Oregon's natural resources, wildlife, and habitat needs receive equal consideration in the commission's structure. This approach leads to the best management decisions for our state's wildlife, habitat, and the public. Biologists and residents within the river basins possess crucial firsthand knowledge that informs decision-making. Please consider this as we aim to restructure the OFW Commission.

Sincerely,
Shawn Billman
