I have been in countless traffic jams where the traffic is at a stand still. At that point when I am on my motorcycle I am in the most dangerous position possible....between two cars. I have to constantly look in my mirrors to look for a car that is not slowing down. I usually can handle it for about 5 min before I split or hit the right shoulder at a slow speed to get past the traffic. Being stuck in a traffic jam is one of the most dangerous places for a bike not only dangerous but awful for most bikes due to no airflow and overheating. All in all this needs to pass for safety reasons and unnecessary conditions for a motorcycle
