I live next to a Jr. High and a High School. Not long ago I had a gentleman laying in the road with his head on the curb right in front of my house smoking off a piece of tin foil. He was there for a good half hour mid morning on a school day. Last summer there was a woman laying on the ground next to my neighbors house either very drunk or high sleeping the effects off. This fall there was a woman in front of the Jr High throwing rocks at parked cars, while the children were entering the school. This really needs to stop. I think what bothers me most is that the children are so used to it, they don't even seem to notice.
