

Submitter: Robert Briggs
On Behalf Of:
Committee: Senate Committee On Education
Measure: SB1583

Any attempt to limit information about any subject must be denied. When one tries to conceal information about any topic, whether it be historical, scientific, moral, or anything else, that person is attempting to limit opinions one can form to only their personally held opinion. The opinion that they hold may have no basis in fact or even rationality. I am thoroughly against blanket information bans as it limits any thought outside a tightly closed box. How many of those boxes have eventually found to be patently untrue and actually harmful in their close strictures? Please allow professionals to choose which materials will best present students and others with the information they need to thoroughly understand the world as they are forming opinions which will will have a determinate effect on the environment in which they live.