Children love community. They learn from families, friends, and their peers about new things, ideas, and boundaries that keep them safe as they are guided through their young years. Those who know them best may not know all the intricacies of teaching, but they certainly have ideas about how their children learn, so let's make sure those moms and dads have ample chances to guide the learning of children of their communities. Counties and states don't know these kids, but their parents do, so keep school boards local. Vote for local folks who can guide children to learn the local way. You'll be glad you did.
