The solution to the legislatures problems are always more money and more control. Usually to "correct" the problems they created in the first place. The last remaining hold the people have over the Oregon legislature is minimizing it's new revenue streams and forcing it to work within some semblance of budget forcing them to behave like all families have to, which is making tough decisions within the budget allowed. Don't peddle this BS of public safety due to wildfires which is exacerbated by poor mismanagement in the first place for the last generation, along with priorities that run counter to common sense, much less truth. The problem is not the funding, it's the spending priorities and Oregon legislature has demonstrated time and time again the fiscal responsibility of a frat boy at an ivy league college on Daddy's dime, just going back to the well when the cash runs out. Grow up and learn to adult.
