Measure: HB4075

Continuous government growth is not sustainable. Government is already so large and powerful that individuals are diminished and subjects for the state. Instead the state should only function as a means to protect rights. No more taxes. The burdens placed on the economy here are evident in the cost of living and low standard of living compared to other states. There are far too many state employees and too many functions by a one party state that is not competent to administer what is already in place. Cut taxes and do less. That is the direction that the state needs to pursue.

Sincerely,

Paul Fooks
