

Submitter: Heather Birdsong
On Behalf Of: Oregonians left out of the room
Committee: Joint Committee On Addiction and Community Safety Response
Measure: HB4002

I am a constituent who is extremely disappointed and saddened to see state leaders pursue harmful (and wildly ineffective) criminalization policies instead of taking meaningful action to increase access to treatment services and housing for Oregonians—a priority clearly expressed by the majority of voting citizens.

In solidarity with hundreds of fellow Oregonians who submitted testimony earlier this month against harmful criminalization proposals, including HB 4002 and HB 4036, I strongly urge lawmakers to follow the evidence and the data: decades of the failed war on drugs makes it plain that sending people to jail for having an addiction only ruins lives. It is cruel, contrary to the purpose of public services, and fails to uphold societal ideals of justice.

I've opposed HB 4002 from the start, and have expressed as much before, but I'm particularly frustrated by the -24 amendment, including the special interests behind it.

When I read that lawmakers invited prosecutors and law enforcement into closed-door meetings to amend HB 4002, I knew the result would be harmful to the people left out of those "negotiations," including people with and communities with lived experience of disparities in the criminal justice system, the behavioral health system, and housing systems. Organizations representing Black and brown communities were shut out of the room. What kind of future are you trying to build? Certainly not a better one for the majority of Oregonians.

HB 4002 -24 embraces a dangerous and damaging criminalization approach at the expense of the safety, health, and well-being of Black and brown communities. I strongly oppose HB 4002 for failing to consider the Oregonians most at-risk of over-policing and government harm: Black and brown people, Indigenous Oregonians, low-income Oregonians, and rural Oregonians.

The latest version of HB 4002 -24 creates massive inequities between counties. People who live in counties without a deflection program will face immediate HB 4002 arrests while people living just a few miles away will be offered connection to treatment. One's zip code shouldn't determine one's ability to access treatment services. An easy, and obvious, fix to this would be to simply require all counties to set up deflection programs.

HB 4002 -24 sets deflection programs in select counties up to fail—in the same way Oregon failed to implement Measure 110. For lower income Oregonians, the shortage of public defenders means cases will be dismissed with no connection to care, but leaving people with arrest records. And HB 4002 -24 recriminalizes addiction long before deflection programs will be set up.

HB 4002 -24 also falls short of investing in Oregon's woefully under resourced mental health and drug addiction treatment services. The status quo of providing just 50% of the capacity necessary to meet the substance use disorder services needed is unacceptable. People are desperate for treatment services. That's punishment enough - putting them in jail doesn't help anyone.

We must do better. And we must do better than HB 4002 -24

At the end of the day, addiction is a health issue. Treating it as a crime causes harm to society as a whole and exacerbates the issue. The addiction crisis demands action, but HB 4002 -24 will do more harm than good. I urge you to press the lawmakers behind HB 4002 to consider the harm this legislation will unleash. It will affect us all negatively.
