On Behalf Of: Treatment beds not jail beds
Committee: Joint Committee On Addiction and Community Safety Response
Measure: HB4002

I am disappointed and but not surprised to see state leaders pursue harmful criminalization policies in the form of HB 4002-24, instead of increasing access to treatment services and housing for Oregonians.

Hundreds of Oregonians submitted testimony earlier this month against harmful criminalization proposals, including HB 4002 and HB 4036. I too want to urge lawmakers to follow the evidence and the data: decades of the failed war on drugs tell us that sending people to jail for having an addiction only ruins lives.

I've opposed HB 4002 from the start but I'm particularly frustrated by the -24 amendment, including the special interests behind it.

When lawmakers invited prosecutors and law enforcement into closed door meetings to amend HB 4002, I knew the result would be harmful to the people left out of those "negotiations," including people with and communities with lived experience of disparities in the criminal justice system, the behavioral health system, and housing systems. Organizations representing Black and brown communities need to be fully included in the legislative process if there are to be amendments to HB 4002.

HB 4002 -24 embraces a failed criminalization approach at the expense of the safety, health, and well-being of Black and brown communities. I strongly oppose HB 4002 for neglecting the Oregonians most at-risk of over-policing and government harm: Black and brown people, Indigenous Oregonians, low-income Oregonians, and rural Oregonians.

The latest version of HB 4002 -24 would create massive inequities between counties. People who live in counties without a deflection program will face immediate HB 4002 arrests while people living just a few miles away will be offered connection to treatment. Your zip code shouldn't determine your ability to access treatment services. An easy fix to this would be to simply require all counties to set up deflection programs.

HB 4002 -24 sets deflection programs in select counties up to fail - in the same way Oregon failed to implement Measure 110. For lower income Oregonians, the shortage of public defenders means cases will be dismissed with no connection to care, but leaving people with arrest records. And HB 4002 -24 recriminalizes addiction long before deflection programs will be set up.

HB 4002 -24 also falls short on investing in Oregon's under resourced mental health and drug addiction treatment services. The status quo of providing just 50% of the capacity necessary to meet the substance use disorder services needed is unacceptable. People are desperate for treatment services. That's punishment enough - putting them in jail doesn't help anyone.

Bottom line, addiction is a health issue, not a crime. The addiction crisis demands action, but HB 4002 -24 does more harm than good. I urge you to press the lawmakers behind HB 4002 to do better and consider the harm this legislation will unleash upon Black and brown Oregonians, and people struggling with addiction.
