No new taxes. Oregon and it's democratic majority has made a habit out of squandering budgets and then just asking tax payers to pick up the slack for their mistakes. The almost 50% of the state that doesn't get a decision in this is tired of it. If it was a true majority it would be hard to argue against but when it's truly almost 50/50 and one group makes all the decisions with the slightest majority it's truly not fair. In this particular case poor decisions were made which resulted in the build get shortfall so sacrifices now should be made to fix it. I understand folks will be laid off and the public infrastructure may suffer but that's how it should be to force folks to make better decisions at election times. We can't just continue to make poor decisions and then force the will of a few on poorly informed voters.
