Instead of raising fees and taxes, why doesn't Oregon go after collecting the hundreds of thousands of dollars in unpaid registration fees from all the drivers with vehicles still driving on our roads with expired tags. Every day I drive around Oregon I see multitudes of cars driving with expired tags. I will also bet that many of these drivers don't have insurance which raises everyone else's insurance rates. If fees and taxes are increased, more drivers will just not bother to renew their registration because they are not fearful of getting a ticket for expired tags.
