Hello, I'm voicing my support for OregonFlora because it's an invaluable resource for leaning about and identifying native plants. It's an authoritative source that I also use for work, looking up taxonomic information and range. I've used it many times and often refer others. I really love the range maps and information on how to use native plants in the garden. So many people are getting interested in using natives, which is a benefit to the environment. This is a great resource for everyone from backyard gardeners to botanists. I know funds are tight, but the environment is our backbone and OregonFlora supports that.
