The state has been relying on community based partners, stakeholders and various NGO's and stewardship groups having a vested interest that have undo influence on the outcome of regulations issued by state agencies. There needs to be a balanced representation for any discussion. Further, there is no direction in this legislation establishing a state policy in regards to rocky areas and just leaves policy decisions to an agency. Until there is a firmly discussed set of policies from the legislature, there should not be any authority delegated to a state agency.
