Subject: Opposition to HB 3362 – Prioritize Enforcement of Existing Laws

Dear Legislators,

I am writing to express my deep concern regarding HB 3362. While legislative action is vital, the State of Oregon must first address its ongoing failure to enforce existing laws—especially those concerning human trafficking and child sexual abuse material (CSAM).

I possess firsthand evidence of systemic negligence by Oregon law enforcement, government agencies, and judicial representatives in handling these crimes. My documented reports, which include clear evidence of trafficking and CSAM violations, have been ignored. State-funded organizations have failed to act in accordance with federal human trafficking laws, and key authorities continue to overlook these serious crimes.

Before introducing new policies under HB 3362, the Oregon Legislature must take responsibility for ensuring that existing laws are upheld. If the state cannot enforce the protections already in place for trafficking survivors, how can it be trusted to implement additional measures? A government that turns a blind eye to its own failures has no business creating new legislation.

I urge you to prioritize accountability. Investigate the negligence within Oregon's government and law enforcement agencies. Survivors deserve justice, not empty policies. Until these fundamental issues are addressed, HB 3362 cannot and should not move forward.

Sincerely,

Misty Hill
