Organic farms often have restaurants on the property, allowing visitors to walk the paths enjoying the gardens, forests, farmland, and know that their food is fresh and organic grown without pesticides, insecticides. Weddings I have attended on farms allowed the couple marrying to 'ride off into the sunset' literally and then enjoying an event set up indoors. This too would be gone. To restrict what people do with their land is government overreach. Owners already have permits upon permits, taxes upon taxes, and now this? This removes more small businesses from working, and that is not what Oregon legislators have promised.
