As a parent of children attending a charter school and a taxpayer, I believe our tax dollars should support diverse educational options, not just traditional public schools. Charter schools provide students with a rich, personalized education, yet they do not receive the same level of funding as traditional public schools. This disparity means our tax contributions are not fully supporting our children's education. Increased funding for charter schools would help serve underserved students and promote greater educational equity. In today's world, families are seeking more schooling options, and they should not face lower funding or fewer opportunities simply because they choose a charter school.
