I am a mother to a 6 year old who is struggling his first year in public school. We are having him evaluated for autism at the moment, but it has been a long process. He is very bright but struggles with emotional and social cues. We feel that the school system isn't helping him as much and have had his days cut to half days. We finally fought for full days since he felt he was missing out on what other kids were experiencing. I support funding for charter schooling.
