Dear Senators,

In the past, states have exploited natural resources. That was in a time when they could “afford” to do so. There seemed to be plenty. Now, we are living in a time in which we are more highly dependent on less natural resources. It is a fact that, barring sudden disaster, we lose natural resources gradually, little by little — realizing too late that they are gone forever. THERE IS NO SLACK ANYMORE.

Please do everything possible to save streams and the wildlife in them. Otherwise, sooner than seems believable, our own species, home sapiens, as part of nature itself, will be gone too.

Thank you.
