

Submitter: Paul Furnari
On Behalf Of: People who follow the science
Committee: House Committee On Climate, Energy, and Environment
Measure, Appointment or Topic: HB3932

Let me get this straight...similar proposals have been submitted to the ODFW Commission 3 times, and each time they failed to advance because they were wholly unsupported by science, so now the legislature wants to take a crack at managing our wildlife? What could possibly go wrong?

How about instead we leave wildlife management to the experts? Let them make the best decisions based on science and not hair-brained emotional appeals. That would clearly be best for everyone, but given the political makeup of the legislature we all know that's unlikely to happen.