I registered to vote on the University of Oregon campus in 2008. I submitted my ballot in a drop box and it was returned to me after the election. The letter informed me my signature didn't match. I checked and they did indeed match. This has happened every single election since. None of my ballots have ever been accepted, even though my signatures match what is on file. I have re-submitted my voter application as I moved around Oregon and insured my signature would be correct. Nevertheless, I always receive my ballot back in the mail. This mail-in voting system has systematically deprived me of a voice the entire 20 years I have lived in Oregon. It must end. Arguments about saving money are ludicrous in the face of losing voices to a crooked and corrupt device.
