As a resident of rural Oregon, I am opposed to changing our convenient and reliable method of voting in Oregon. Since 1987, voters have been confident that their vote would be secure and the elderly and busy residents of our state have conveniently been able to vote from their homes with our reliable post system. I always drive my ballot into our local elections office to drop off as an extra layer of security but trust paper more than a hackable electronic system. Implementing a new system of in person voting would make voting more difficult for our seniors, busy mothers, and other hardworking Oregonians. It would also add more costs and risk to our current voting system. Thank you
