Ease of voting is crucial to ensuring access to voting and the democratic process. Many people face obstacles that make in-person voting difficult, such as no paid time off work, no child care, having young children, etc. As the mother of a young child, I know that I would have missed opportunities to vote in the past few years if I had not had access to a mail in ballot. Furthermore, mail in voting ensures that voters are able to take their time and read about each candidate and measure so they can make informed choices. Especially with ranked choice voting, access to the voter guide and time to deliberate is essential.
