This law would unfairly exclude the large number of rural Oregonians who live far away from any town or city. Voting by mail is an Oregon practice that helps us include voices from all over the state, and not just those in metropolitan areas and large cities. It also extremely accessible to working people who may not have the time to line up to poll. It also affords us time to think about our decisions within the stress free environment of our homes. I take pride in our voting system and it would be a big mistake to take it away.
