

Submitter: Kalin Schmoltdt

On Behalf Of:

Committee: Senate Committee On Rules

Measure, Appointment or Topic: SB210

A healthy democracy depends on participation from a broad range of views or it cannot claim to be representative, and the decisions of government will not be accepted as the will of the people. To have faith in the rule of law we must balance ease of participation with security of elections.

Considering the mysterious relative silence about voting fraud following this election (compared to previous ones), election security has not been proven to be a significant problem that would justify changes that make voting participation more difficult.