I believe this would allow those whom are on strike and the opposing organization to closer to a level platform. All too often Employers utilize a strategy to wait out its employees on strike, knowing that their resources and funds are limited financially in comparison the Employers. Being allowed to collect Unemployment benefits by those on strike help reduce the financial advantage that employers have over the employees on strike. If we believe in Democracy and are sincerely negotiating with fair and best intent, the it is absolutely necessary to equalize the financial defecit that would otherwise be used as a unethical and unfair advantage that the Employers inherintly have over employees on strike. Moreover, Employees on strike should be financially penalized and suffer such hardship while fighting for their rights.
