No one should be rewarded pay by the tax payers of Oregon for REFUSING to work. If workers striking for better benefits and pay with to sacrifice their paychecks for a few days to better themselves then they have every right to do so. However, to force all working Oregonians to pay for their cause is absolute tyranny and communism. It should be considered unconstitutional as it would not be a republican form of government.

Keep in mind the horrible price Portland students have paid for the unmerited weeks long strike of the Portland Teacher's Union. This strike sacrificed the good of Oregon students for pay for persons, many of whom do not teach in the classroom. And what about the irreparable harm done across Oregon due to striking nurses and medical staff at Legacy and Providence health centers? I personally have a friend whose surgery to remove precancerous cells was delayed 5 months due to these strikes. In most cases these workers received back pay in their deal with their employers. Now this bill would make it a law for other tax payers to support harm done to them by these ungrateful and selfish workers? Vote NO on SB916!
