I can't help but believe that the need for a gun admits that I am living my life in fear.... enough to want a gun to out of fear, so that I would shoot someone who either fears or hates me enough to shoot or kill me. I know I'm not that person of danger the shooter will need to examine their feelings as a result of their actions. I'd rather not live in a world that makes the assumption that I might need to protect myself from the strangers around me!.
