“May have fiscal impact” to who?

To the young woman who just moved into her apartment and was able to defend herself with a handgun they could barely afford?

To the citizens that now have to pay for a 100 million dollar background check system for permits, before a gun buyer can then fill out another background check?

It's crystal clear this is a flawed bill, will you put your name behind something that strips your citizens of a constitutional right unless they have money?

We should use this surge of focus on firearms rights to hone in on safety, with a close look at tax incentives/credits for gun safes and gun safe technology that not only prevents tragedies but preserves rights and won't be challenged constitutionally.

Respectfully,

Andy Munson
