Speculative ticket reselling is one of the worst practices of the secondary ticketing industry. Why it is even allowed for someone to sell something they don't even own is beyond me. It completely drives up the price of tickets while there is no business risk for the reseller. As a concert promoter, we'd like to see, at bare minimum, speculative ticket selling outlawed. Speculative tickets lead to fake tickets being sold, which leads to disappointed patrons when they try to attend the concert they purchased exorbitantly priced tickets for on a secondary site.
