Since moving to Oregon 10 years ago, I have found Oregon's small local agriculture tourism style farms to be one of the most inspiring and enjoyable aspects of our community. There's always at least two on my list of things to do whenever family or friends visit from out of town, and they are always everyone's favorite memories. And furthermore, I love having a store full of a variety of locally produced goods and produce to shop from on a regular basis. I believe it's crucial to support these farmers and allow them to operate business in a way that is just common sense to help our local business owners and farmers thrive.
