There is a considerable amount of resources being used to try and prevent following the law. If local and federal officials worked together, it would be easier to remove those that are not legally here. Why are the dems working so hard to protect criminals? Federal agents have a job to do. In this case, it is to remove those that are not legally in the country. Note that word usage: "not legally in the country". That means illegal. That means breaking the law.

If someone stole your car, would you work this hard to protect who stole it?
